Other Inaugural Resources:

Official Tickets:

Unless you have a contact inside the new administration, the most reliable source of tickets is your Senator or local Congressman. Each member is given a certain number of tickets for constituents and supports, but this is a lottery so there are no guarantees. If you have contacts in their offices, use them.

Here are the links for Senators Scott and Rubio's online request forms.

Florida GOP Gala:

We have heard that the Republican Party of Florida will also be hosting a gala event. Full details have not yet been released.

Travel & Accommodations:

If you didn't make arrangements well in advance just in case, It's going to be very expensive. I recommend using Airbnb and looking in Alexandria / Arlington areas, near Crystal City and Pentagon City are ideal. These are just a short Uber ride to main event areas in DC. If you really want to take the Metro (I don't recommend it), these areas are all on the metro line. These areas are very close to Regan National Airport which is also on the metro.

Other Resources:

Some other great resources for all things Inaugural are the White House Historical page, the Washington DC City Guide and the Joint Congressional Commission for Inaugural Ceremonies.

Other Events:

In addition to the official swearing in ceremony, parade and Presidential ball, there are a lot of other unsanctioned events that you can buy tickets for. I don't know how reliable this website is, but I've found that there are some good resources. Please use them only as a reference. Some things may be outdated, but you can google for updated links. <https://www.presidential-inauguration.com/inaugural-balls/>
